Get a Root Beer Belly

For our annual Summer Soda Tasting event on July 20, 2014, attendees will be sampling more than 75 root beers, birch beers and sarsparillas. Look at that number again...75!! !

Many people have asked Galco's owner John Nese, "What's the best root beer out there?" This year, you will be able to judge for yourself!

Friends of the Southwest Museum Coalition

As always, Galco's Summer Soda Tasting 4 is a fundraiser for the Friends of the Southwest Museum Coalition that is working to re-open Los Angeles' first museum as well as the Casa de Adobe to display portions of the museum's spectacular collections.

Entertainment for all!

In between soda tastings, guests can enjoy a variety of entertainment featuring local talent including:
The Mele 'Ohana Ukulele Group, singing sensation Genesee Hall (pictured left) and blues by Greger
Walnum. There will be fun for kids as well! (Photos by Martha Benedict)

2 Mayor Garcetti Event : Small Biz Entrepreneurship:Doing Business in

Tue Jul 8, 2014 10:18 pm (PDT) . Posted by: asncaalert

Good afternoon,

My name is Leo Yeung and I am an intern with the Mayor's Office of Economic Development with a focus in small business. I have been working closely with the Benjamin Franklin Library & Edendale Branch Library to plan a summer library series on entrepreneurship.

I'm sure you are often asked "How do I start my own business?".

We are hoping to engage the East & Mid-City side community in conversation about Small Business Entrepreneurship. It is important to encourage people to open up a business and keep them growing in order to keep our communities vibrant. Our main goal is to highlight the available resources in the City to help people PLAN and START a business and to point out common pitfalls in the startup process. This event will be for Pre-startup and new small business owners.

We would love if you could help us get the word out.

Attached below is the flyer for our event at the Benjamin Franklin on Saturday, July 12, Edendale Library on Wednesday, July 16, and our series calendar for upcoming events.

Feel free to contact me if you have any questions.

SMALL BUSINESS ENTREPRENEURSHIP: STARTING BUSINESS IN LA
PRESENTED BY THE MAYOR'S OFFICE OF ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT AND THE LOS ANGELES
PUBLIC LIBRARY

WHAT: A workshop to teach the basics of small business entrepreneurship, how to legally start a business in Los Angeles, and introduce resources provided by the City of Los Angeles and regional partners that assist with small business development.

When: Saturday July,12 & Wednesday, July 16, 10am-12pm

Where: Benjamin Franklin Library & Edendale Branch Library

WHO: Pre-startup and new small business owners

REGISTER: Online at:

<https://benjaminfranklinlibrary-moed.eventbrite.com> <https://benjaminfranklinlibrary-moed.eventbrite.com>

3 NELA Homelessness: Get Involved!

Tue Jul 8, 2014 10:18 pm (PDT) . Posted by: asncaalert

From: Rebecca Prine <piratebec@aol.com>

Date: Tuesday, July 8, 2014

Good evening friends and supporters of Recycled Resources for the Homeless,

Welcome those of you who have joined us in the past and an enthusiastic new welcome to those of you who are interested in getting involved.

The goal of Recycled Resources for the Homeless is to improve the lives of our homeless neighbors and to support putting an end to chronic homelessness in our NELA community.

In the next 30 days we have two activities and we are hoping you can join us as we work toward improving lives.

Saturday July 12th

Recycled Resources Hosts Monthly Outreach & Engagement

10AM-2PM

Meet at 715 Nolden Street Highland Park 90042

This event is great to attend if you would like to be directly involved in working with our homeless neighbors. The event entails volunteers forming groups and going out into our community, distributing hygiene lunches and clothing to our homeless neighbors and providing support and resources to them. This work is important as it allows us to gather vital information needed to advocate for local resources as well as letting our homeless neighbors know people care about them. More information can be found on our website. If you plan to attend PLEASE RSVP!

Tuesday August 5th

NELA Homeless Coalition Meeting

7PM - 8:30PM

Eagle Rock City Hall (downstairs room)

2035 Colorado Blvd Eagle Rock 90041

This is a monthly meeting where NELA neighbors, stakeholders, providers, leaders, businesses, and groups interested in ending chronic homelessness meet to share ideas and resources.

This is a good event to attend if you want to be involved in addressing homelessness however may not be sure what to do or where to start or if you have concerns or suggestions about a local homeless issue.

Also, if you haven't yet, please join both Recycled Resources for the Homeless & the NELA Homeless Coalition on Facebook to show your support and stay connected:

Recycled Resources: <https://www.facebook.com/RecycledResourcesforthehomeless>

NELA Homeless Coalition: <https://www.facebook.com/nelahomelesscoalition>

As the downright HOT summer season is upon us we can use your support to ensure our homeless neighbors stay hydrated and cool in these hot months.

Donations of water, socks, and underwear are always needed!

If you are able to attend our outreach on Saturday, consider bringing ice bottled waters and your cooler to offer a much needed cool resource to those in need.

Please respond to this email if you are able to join us, would like to donate something, or have any questions.

We are a nonprofit organization and all donations are tax deductible. We operate on a zero percent profit margin and are staffed 100% by volunteers.

In unity change IS POSSIBLE. Please help us assist our 200+ NELA homeless neighbors.

Have a great & cool week,

Rebecca Prine

Soirées Mystique - An Evening of Victorian Enchantment

Victor Ian Élan, 19th Century Conjuror and Clairvoyant is a Southern California-based performer of magical and psychic entertainment who appears regularly at private parties, corporate events and charity galas. Currently, he is also creator and producer of a highly interactive and awe inspiring show, Soirées Mystique - An Evening of Victorian Enchantment, which is currently being presented at the Perry House at Heritage Square Museum in Los Angeles, CA.

This unique style of performance takes participants on a journey back in time. Before their eyes and inside their minds, sitters witness demonstrations in 19th century conjuring, observe experiments in Victorian mind-reading, and even participate in an authentic antebellum spirit séance show. Participants join together to experience the unknown and possibly even travel beyond the veil to relive the mystery of Victorian magic.

Soirées Mystique delivers the most unique experience one can imagine. With a suitably quaint audience limited to 30 individuals, guests will be treated, in an authentic setting to an enchanting evening of exceptional entertainment.

The William Hayes Perry Mansion and Heritage Square

The largest house at the museum, The Perry Residence was built in 1876 by prominent businessman and lumber baron William Hayes Perry. When this beautiful example of classic Greek Revival Italianate style home was built in the then-fashionable neighborhood of Boyle Heights, it was arguably the finest and most expensive residence yet seen in Los Angeles.

Heritage Square Museum transports visitors to the end of the 19th century, when California was a fledgling state Los Angeles began shaping itself into the metropolis it is today. On weekends, tours take visitors on an exploration of Southern California history, architecture and culture as interpreted through our historic structures. Heritage Square Museum is "Where History Comes Alive!"

Find out more by visiting Heritage Square Museum online today.

Heritage Square Museum members are eligible for a general admission discount. Please contact Kim Kirui at 323.225.2700 x223 or administrator@heritagesquare.org for details and discount code to be applied during checkout.

EAGLE ROCK — Councilman Jose Huizar wants to change city law to allow new restaurants, bars and shops along Colorado Boulevard to stay open beyond 9 p.m.

Huizar introduced a City Council motion to modify what's called the Colorado Boulevard Specific Plan, an ordinance that has been credited with creating a more pedestrian-friendly environment along the street but also limits new businesses – including restaurants and bars – to operate only between 7 am and 9 pm unless they get special city permission. The law applies only to businesses that opened after 1992, when the law went into effect. Many of the new businesses were not aware of or had ignored the restriction until a new Eagle Rock bar and restaurant recently got in trouble over violating the ordinance.

Huizar, in a recent email newsletter, said the ordinance puts new Colorado businesses at a competitive disadvantage and needs to be updated:

One regulation, or limitation of the current plan, is a prohibition on business operating between 9 p.m. and 7 a.m. – meaning neighborhood establishments that choose to move here need to close earlier, and – in some instances – open later than their competitors in nearby cities, such as Pasadena and Glendale.

The motion, if adopted by the full council, would direct the Planning Department and City Attorney to look into the feasibility of amending the hours contained in the ordinance.

11 LAPD Museum Houses History of City's Dark Side

Reporter: Peter Gilstrap

In the trendy northeast Los Angeles neighborhood of Highland Park, on one end of York Boulevard you'll find record stores, cafes and hipster boutiques. On the other end you'll find the Los Angeles Police Museum. This collection of all things LAPD lives in the city's last surviving 1920s station house, and offers a visceral glimpse into the gritty hell and Hollywood noir of the L.A. cop world.

Even if you've never been here, there's still a good chance you've seen the place. With its classic Neo-Renaissance, just-the-facts-ma'am, architecture, the structure has been a shooting hot spot for decades, and not just the kind with bullets.

"Major motion picture-wise, 'Gangster Squad,' it was out last year, filmed here," says Glynn Martin, the museum's executive director and former LAPD sergeant. "From television, there's a new show on called 'Playing House,' they were here earlier this year. 'Justified,' 'Parks and Rec'... the original 'Transformers,' 'Flags of Our Fathers,' Clint Eastwood's 'Blood Work,' 'Dukes of Hazzard 2,' 'Stop Loss,' 'When a Stranger Calls.' It's a long, long list and it's a very popular filming location."

Martin sits in a small conference room, a space not open to visitors. As with so much in the unique world of the police, the mundane mixes with the extraordinary. On a large table sits a pizza box larger than a manhole cover. A cop-size pie, by God. There are two slices left from the original 44. There is also a carton of cookies. There are no doughnuts.

On a nearby table are small envelopes yellowed with age stacked neatly. They're filled with negatives from crime scenes — murders, robberies, apparent suicides, all taken in the year 1953, all labeled by some forgotten typist. One example: John Doe, homicide, San Fernando Boulevard rail yard. Hold the thin film up to the light, and there is the mystery corpse in the white areas of the negative, sprawled in the contrasting dark of an empty boxcar.

Police station No. 11 has been home to such items for decades. From 1925 to 1983, the building served as the Northeast Division station. When the cops relocated, it stood vacant, decaying and forgotten. At one point, says Martin, the place was so badly damaged by fire you could stand in the basement and see through to the roof. In 2001, old No. 11 got a major face-lift and a new lease on life when it was resurrected as the museum. It's now on the National Register of Historic Places.

"Raymond Chandler said the history of Los Angeles is the history of its police department," offers Martin, "and I find an awful lot of truth in that. What I also find is that drives an enduring interest in the LAPD. Really what we're about are three things: faces, places and cases."

Among those cases are some of the most notorious in modern memory, incidents that have inspired the work of many writers, including former cop Joseph Wambaugh, Michael Connelly and James Ellroy, who has participated in museum events for years.

"We're talking Black Dahlia, the assassination of Robert F. Kennedy, the Charles Manson case, the Night Stalker, Hillside Strangler, the Onion Field, The North Hollywood shootout, the SLA shootout," reels off Martin. "These are events of world renown, and I think that is probably the thing that makes this special. Those kinds of things continue to drive interest in what the LAPD is and what they do."

The museum displays powerful artifacts from those crimes, alongside Hollywood relics. You can see Patty Hearst's iconic M1 carbine, and the suit coat worn by Jack Webb in the classic "Dragnet" series. Behind the museum there's a bullet-ridden squad car from a bank job gone bad next to the bad guys' even more bullet-riddled Chevy Celebrity. Back inside, the hall holds poster-size blowups of Police Beat magazine, featuring Bob Hope and the stars of the classic LAPD TV series "Adam-12" on the covers. You'll find an undetonated pipe bomb the size of a dachshund, and decades of well-used billy clubs and handcuffs.

Down a hallway you enter a cement room containing five cells that look like a block of gray cages. Back in the day, Martin says the ceiling bars created a hanging hazard. Nearby is a well-worn metal chair. In front of it, at chin level, there's a rack of numbers.

"Now you can come here and take your own mug shot in a chair that was sat in by thousands of criminals prior to your arrival," says Martin, as 4-year-old visitor Zyla Delgado plops down in the chair that has held so many law-breaking beholds.

"It's a big attraction for the youngsters," Martin says.

A mannequin used in the 1963 Onion Field trial to show where slain Officer Ian Campbell was shot.

Zyla's mother, Rose, says it's the first time at the museum for the family, who lives in nearby Montclair. "I've never been here before and I think it's amazing. I've seen this stuff in movies but I've never actually seen it." Neither has Zyla, who rockets herself from the booking chair and races into a grim jail cell that boasts a cot, a toilet and a sink. What's her favorite thing?

"The jails," she says. Then she screams with glee and runs to another cell.

The biggest draw, however, is upstairs. In 1997, two heavily armed men clad in body armor and ski masks tried to rob a Bank of America in North Hollywood. Both were killed in the ensuing firefight. Their outfits and weapons now adorn two mannequins, complete with bullet holes.

Next to the formidable mannequins, a monitor plays the raw, riveting footage of the entire shootout. "We always warn the school groups and the kids of the material," Martin cautions. "It's not bloody or gruesome, but if a kid knows what they're looking at, it's probably not the best things for the youngest of our visitors."

Museum docent Cal Drake knows about being on the receiving end of a bullet. The 84-year-old retired detective joined the LAPD in 1952, and received the Medal of Valor after being shot by Black Panthers during a 1969 raid. He grew up near the station house, though he spent little time in the building during his career. Now he's here once a week, guiding visitors through decades of crime history of which he was a part.

"I was raised in this division," he says. "I went to high school in Eagle Rock across the hill here. I didn't want to work this station. It was a good place to work, good people to work with. I didn't want to put my neighbors in jail."

If it seems like reliving some of the highest-impact criminal events of the last century on a weekly basis might be a bit tough on a man, remember that this man was a cop.

"It can be somewhat emotional," admits Drake, "but not tremendously. When I'm emotional, you won't know it. That comes from the business, you know?" Thanks to the Police Museum, it's a business that he is still not distanced from, retired or not.

"This kind of gets you back into the swing of things," Drake says. "I didn't want to get that far away from the department, I enjoyed my time on the police department. It was the best job I've ever had."

Highland Park Painted: The Mt. Washington Plein Air Painters

"At the turn of the century, most "serious" artists in America were trained in Europe. French Impressionist painters at the time preferred to work en plein air, meaning "in open air," which took the practice of painting outdoors, using natural light. When artists returned home to America the artistic styles and techniques they brought back with them often took on novel forms. This was certainly the case when European-schooled artists migrated to Los Angeles and found a city in close proximity to deserts, beaches, chaparral and snow capped mountains -- ideal settings for development of the California Plein Air movement." - KCET Departures

We're proud to feature the work of our local Mt. Washington Plein Air painters whom, through their work in this exhibit, have captured the light of our beloved hometown; Highland Park.

Art in Various Forms

"My sculptures and writings are interconnected. I start out by writing strange nonsensical stories that goes on to inspire a visual sculptural piece that is meant to bridge the imaginary world and the real world. I am always looking for a new way to break the boundaries of art making and explore the blurred lines between existing art genres, and by working in multiple forms helps me expand as an artist." - Tory Lin

 Hermon Local Issues community meeting of the Arroyo Seco Neighborhood Council meets THIS Thursday, July 10 at 7 p.m. in the Fellowship Center, 5800 Monterey Road (at Wheeling Way) -- and it's all for you. This is a good time, not only to meet and visit with your neighbors, but bring up any concerns, solutions, or great ideas you have for our unique community. We even have an action item about having more goats clear City brush -- while saving money. Really. It's just so Hermon.

Our Field Deputy, Julio Esperias, from Councilmember Jose Huizar's office will be with us as well as LAPD Sr. Lead Officer Austin Fernald, substituting for SLO John Pedroza on his day off.

You'll want to meet SLO Fernald who is now Sr. Lead Officer in Lincoln Heights as he will be our SLO when Officer Pedroza retires this November. Bring your questions for them.

We'll also be planning a farewell and thank you dinner for SLO Pedroza to be on our next Local Issues date, Thursday, September 11. Come be part of that.

Did you know the large, very old high pressure gas line that runs under Avenue 60, Hermon Dog Park, Franklin High School, and on out to Eagle Rock -- because it does not deliver to individual homes -- is NOT odorized. That means, just as in the San Bruno explosion a couple years ago, there would be no warning of a final crack or compromise to the pipe. The Northeast L.A. Survival Disaster Task Force, headed by Mark Legassie, will bring an interesting initial report about this and what we're doing to address this very real concern.

Lastly, that night, remember to bring something for the sharing table -- a good book you just finished, some succulents or seedlings from your summer garden, a homemade baked good you made two of, or a piece of jewelry someone else might enjoy now. The idea is you share something, you take something. (I do have it on good authority there will be a variety of flashlights). Oh, and as always, there'll be refreshments. So come.

 Mea culpa, mea culpa, dear Middy -- our Hermon "Clean Team" four-footed Chow-mix mascot -- for missing you in the list of workers I thanked from the Bulky Item Drop-Off some weeks back. Middy was all there, sniffing this and that (right in there with the workers). So thank you, sweet Middy, for helping out your old gang.

It's all good . . . in Hermon where quirky works, families return,
and dogs sleep all night long.
